EARS launch events are potentially hazardous. EARS and New Farm accept no liability for any accident, injury, damage or loss howsoever caused except to the extent required by the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977. In entering the property you accept that all risks are assumed by you voluntarily. You are strongly advised to consider the following points amongst others and if you have any doubt you should not proceed further in this event.

1. Your personal insurance arrangements
2. The suitability of clothing and footwear
3. Protection for you head and eyes in particular, since there is a possibility of items falling from the sky.
4. Allergic reaction to agrochemicals used in crop spraying. The farmer may be spraying, or have sprayed very close to the launch area. If you have any sort of allergic reaction to agrochemicals you should not enter the launch site.

For its part EARS has made detailed arrangements for the protection of your safety and you should take careful note of the following:

1. Range Safety Officers (RSO's) - are easily identifiable in fluorescent yellow vests & are able to assist you with any safety problem.
2. First Aid available on site.
3. Emergency services contact details are held by the RSO.

You must:

1. Comply with any requests made by EARS Safety Officers.
2. Use publicly designated areas only. No go areas will be clearly marked. No one at any time should enter unauthorized areas, including the launching area and surrounding fields.
3. Not touch any item on site, which does not belong to you.
